Hands Free TN Law Several new laws are in effect including the new Hands Free Tennessee law, which makes it illegal for any driver to hold a cell phone or any mobile device with any part of their body. The law also prohibits the driver from writing, reading, or sending any text while driving; reaching for a cell phone or mobile device in a manner in which the driver is no longer seated; watch a video or movie on a cell phone or mobile device; and record or broadcast video on a cell phone or mobile device. The law is known as public chapter 412 and is an effort to reduce crashes and deaths from distracted driving in the Volunteer State. In 2018, there were over 24,600 crashes involving distracted drivers. Statistics show that there were 59 distracted driving cases in Henry County in 2018 and already 10 in 2019. Violations of the law will be a class C misdemeanor with a $50 fine on first and second offense. Third or higher offense or any that cause a crash will result in a $100 fine.
