- Stay seated at all times and keep your heads and arms inside the bus while riding. When exiting the bus, you should wait until the bus has come to a complete stop, exit from the front using the handrail to avoid falling, and cross the street at least 10 feet (or 10 giant steps) in front of the bus.
- Know your home phone number and address, work number, and family members, the number of another trusted adult, and 911 for emergencies.
- If you walk to school, walk on the sidewalk; if there is no sidewalk, walk on the shoulder of the road. Before crossing the street, stop and look left, right and left again in front of a parked car.
- If you drive or are driven to school, don't block crosswalks and take care in school zones.
- Never walk while texting or talking on the phone or while carrying a backpack.
- When choosing a backpack, choose a style that is never heavier than 15% of your body weight and never hanging more than 4 inches below the waist.
- If you ride a bicycle to school, know the rules of the road and make a complete stop before crossing the street and walk the bike across.
- If walking or biking, wear bright-colored clothing or have reflective surfaces on your backpack.
- If driving, never pass a vehicle stopped for pedestrians or a bus loading or unloading children.
- Don't bend down in front of the bus to tie shoes or pick up items, as the driver may not see you before starting to move.

Although money matters, fighting over resources is never a good way to start any day. The good news is that there could be a financial opening now. The extra cash might not ease the situation completely or heal a tense family situation, but problems are here to be solved. Take walks to gain clarity and think before you talk. The dilemma of spending time alone or with your loved ones may settle your sense of peace. Thankfully, a little planning enables you to squeeze in both. You might believe you already sacrificed too much to make the relationship work, but the energy still leaks out of balance. Do not neglect your own interests now, even if you're quick to deny your emotions. There's no need to create a big drama in your head. Challenge your fear of rejection by speaking your truth. Taking time to reconstruct your past memories goes a long way toward getting your personal life in order. Instead of succumbing to repressed negativity, reveal your heart when they cross your mind. Sharing the love that's buried in your heart reconnects you with your dreams and gives you a chance to make them come true.	Life is about variation. Nothing is fun if you do it all the time, you even grow bored of your favorite dessert if you eat it every day. Avoid falling into the trap of repetition.
